There are more songs written about love than just about anything else. "Love is all there is" is a movie, a belief, a way of being. We say "I love you" to acquaintances, though perhaps not enough to those closest to us. "I love this" can be said about just about anything. Being "in love" means different things to different people. So what is love to you, and how do you show it? Maybe more importantly, how do you receive it?

The month of love will be decorated with reds, pinks, hearts embossed with sayings, and pressure to perform. The second month of the year where we start to get our groove back from the holidays' bang and reset after January. This month, I implore you to show love by being curious, by giving grace, and by remembering that whatever is in front of you might not be about you, though it certainly is something you can contribute to. Tap into the love you deserve and can endlessly create. Let it flow around you without borders, filling the world with your unique gifts, talents, and ability to be you. Love understands all languages, so which one will you usher into this existence today? 💕

PS: The market is heating back up! If you or anyone you know has been on the sidelines, we'd love to connect so you don't miss out!
